

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

On-line sale client web site managing system. An enterprise web site is built in a servo main frame, enabling an enterprise owner to through internet make on-line sale trade with clients. The enterprise web site includes a client web site managing system by which clients can directly set up basic data of their companies or personal basic data in the enterprise web site. The client web site managing system includes a client data managing system, a client department managing system, a client employee managing system and a price query/negotiation record managing system. The present invention provides a trade web site which can easily combine information of the enterprise and clients and make on-line sale.